

Unit 35 - Using indefinites (1) - French indefinites

1 Definitions

An indefinite word is one which indicates identity or quantity in a general or non-specific way. These can be indefinite pronouns (as with quelqu'un), indefinite adverbs (as with n'importe où) or indefinite adjectives (as with n'importe quel).

2 Autre - other

2.1 When used as an adjective, autre is always preceded by a determinant (un, l', mon etc.). Note that un / une autre becomes d'autres in the plural :

Viens un autre jour	L'autre livre était plus cher
Come another day	The other book was more expensive
Avez-vous d'autres pullovers dans ce style ?
Do you have any other jumpers in this style ?

2.2 D'autres (and not des autres*) is also used in the pronoun form :

Aucun de ces pullovers est à ma taille. Est-ce que vous en avez d'autres dans ce style ?
None of these jumpers fit me. Do you have any others in this style ?

3 Tel - such

3.1 Tel is usually preceded by the indefinite article un / une, or de in the plural :

Une telle perspicacité est rare chez les enfants
Such perceptiveness is rare in children
De telles erreurs sont compréhensibles chez les débutants
Mistakes like that are understandable in beginners

4 Plusieurs - several

Note that plusieurs, which is always plural, has no special feminine form :

Il y a plusieurs voitures dans leur allée - ils ont sûrement invité des amis
There are several cars in their drive - they must have invited friends over

5 Différent - different / various

5.1 When used before a noun différent has the sense of various :

Le comité a examiné différentes possibilités avant d'arriver à une décision
The committee considered various options before arriving at a decision

5.2 When used after a noun différent has the sense of different :

En ce qui concerne la politique, ils ont souvent des points de vue différents
When it comes to politics, they often have different points of view

6 Chaque, chacun(e) - each / every, each / every one

6.1 Chaque is a singular adjective and has only one form, whilst chacun(e) is a singular pronoun :

Chaque passage de la chanson à la radio lui rapporte des droits d'auteurs
Each time the song is played on the radio he earns royalties

UNIT 35 - USING INDEFINITES (1) - FRENCH INDEFINITES

Chacune de ses chansons lui rapporte des droits d'auteurs
Each of his songs earns him royalties

- 6.2 When expressing frequency, tous / toutes les is generally preferred :

Le conseil des ministres se tient tous les mercredis matin
The Cabinet meets every Wednesday morning

7 Tout

- 7.1 When used as an adjective, tout must always agree with the noun to which it is referring. When used with a determinant such as le or mon it means all :

Tous les articles pris lors du cambriolage ont été retrouvés
All the items taken during the burglary were retrieved

When used without a determinant it has the more hypothetical sense of any :

Tout Français qui se respecte le saurait
Any self-respecting Frenchman would know that

The adjective tout is often used with demonstrative pronouns (ce, celle) :

Il va faire une liste de tous ceux / toutes celles qui veulent venir
He's going to make a list of all those who want to come

Watch the spelling when tout is used with ce qui or ce que :

Tout ce qui (and not tous qui*) compte c'est qu'il est revenu sain et sauf
All that matters is that he has returned safely

- 7.2 When used as a pronoun, tout agrees with the noun which it is replacing. Note that the final -s of tous is pronounced :

Il y a beaucoup de restaurants en ville mais tous sont fermés le lundi
There are a lot of restaurants in town, but they're all closed on Mondays

- 7.3 Where tout is used without referring to a specific noun it has the meaning of "everything" :
Grâce à lui, tout a été réglé - Thanks to him, everything has been sorted out

Where tous / toutes are used without referring to a specific noun they have the meaning everyone :
C'est un homme qui était aimé de tous - He was man who was loved by everyone

- 7.4 When used as an adverb, tout means all in the sense of completely, very. Note that it is invariable in front of masculine adjectives but not feminine adjectives beginning with a consonant :

Tes cheveux sont tout mouillés - Your hair is all wet
Ta robe est toute froissée - Your dress is all creased

Agreement is optional in front of feminine adjectives beginning with a vowel or aspirate h :
Elle était tout(e) excitée / heureuse d'avoir réussi ses examens
She was very excited / happy at having passed her exams

- 7.5 Tous / toutes les deux can be used to express the English both :

Ses deux fils / filles l'ont tous / toutes les deux suivi dans la profession
His two sons / daughters both followed him into the profession
